Dr. Ferrari is President and CEO of the Houston Methodist Research Institute (HMRI), and Executive Vice President-Academics of the Houston Methodist Hospital, where Dr. Michael DeBakey practiced for over 60 years. HMRI is home to over 1,500 research professionals, and over 1,000 clinical trials and protocols in the principal domains of medicine and surgery. Dr. Ferrari's own primary research interests are in cancer nanomedicine, a field he pioneered. He has published about 400 archival papers, six books, earned over 50 patents, and has been recognized with many awards in the USA, and in Europe. His prior faculty appointments were at the University of California Berkeley, The Ohio State University, the University of Texas Medical School in Houston and M.D. Anderson Cancer Center. He currently also serves as Senior Associate Dean at Weill Cornell Medicine in New York.
